Sommario/riassunto	It is with great pleasure that, as guest co-editors, we bring you this special issue of the International Journal of Gender and Entrepreneurship (IJGE) based on a selection of papers presented at the 6th Diana International Conference. We are fortunate that the papers included in this special issue cover research undertaken in both developed (Australia, Canada and the UK) and developing countries (China and Vietnam) using a mix of quantitative and qualitative methods (including in-depth interviews). Further, the sample selection processes involved in the studies was extremely varied. Two studi
