

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910821478003321
Autore	Chan David K.
Titolo	Action reconceptualized : human agency and its sources / / David K. Chan
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Lanham, Maryland : , : Lexington Books, , 2016 ©2016
ISBN	1-4985-1965-2
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (231 p.)
Disciplina	128/.4
Soggetti	Act (Philosophy) Agent (Philosophy) Ethics
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Contents; Preface; Introduction; Chapter One: Towards a Theory of Action; Chapter Two: Intention; Chapter Three: Desire; Chapter Four: From Volitions to Tryings; Chapter Five: Problems and Issues in Action Theory; Chapter Six: Rational and Moral Agency; Conclusion; Bibliography; Index
Sommario/riassunto	In re-examining the concepts of desire, intention, and trying, David K. Chan brings a fresh approach toward resolving many of the problems that have occupied philosophers of action for almost a century. This book not only presents a complete theory of human agency but also, by developing the conceptual tools needed to do moral philosophy, lays the groundwork for formulating an ethics that is rooted in a clear, intuitive, and coherent moral psychology.