

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910822118403321
Autore	Terpstra Taco T
Titolo	Trading communities in the Roman world [[electronic resource]] : a micro-economic and institutional perspective / / by Taco T. Terpstra
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Boston, : Brill, 2013
ISBN	90-04-24513-8
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (261 p.)
Collana	Columbia studies in the classical tradition, , 0166-1302 ; ; v. 37
Disciplina	381.0937
Soggetti	Microeconomics Social archaeology - Rome Rome Commerce History Rome (Italy) History To 476
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Preface -- Abbreviations -- Introduction -- Intra-community exchange and the use of law in Puteoli -- Interaction -- Inter-community exchange and the role of trading stations in Puteoli -- Coalitions of foreign merchants and shipowners in Ostia -- Inter-community trade and the City of Rome -- Roman traders in the province of Asia -- Bibliography -- Index.
Sommario/riassunto	Ancient Roman trade was severely hampered by slow transportation and by the absence of a state that helped traders enforce their contracts. In Trading Communities in the Roman World: A Micro-Economic and Institutional Perspective Taco Terpstra offers a new explanation of how traders in the Roman Empire overcame these difficulties. Previous theories have focused heavily on dependent labor, arguing that transactions overseas were conducted through slaves and freedmen. Taco Terpstra shows that this approach is unsatisfactory. Employing economic theory, he convincingly argues that the key to understanding long-distance trade in the Roman Empire is not patron-client or master-slave relationships, but the social bonds between ethnic groups of foreign traders living overseas and the local communities they joined.

