| Sommario/riassunto      | "In the early 1570s, Anna of Saxony (1544-77), second wife of the Dutch nobleman and rebel leader William of Orange, set Europe's noble | courts ablaze with one of the sixteenth century's most sensational scandals. Although destined for life of fabulous riches on the side of her glamorous husband, Anna failed to find happiness as political reversals and revolution in the Low Countres led to near destitution and a profound marital crisis. The embittered princess embarked on an love affair with the father of one of the age's greatest painters and gave birth to an illegitimate child. Anna's dramatic tale concludes with her descent into madness and subsequent death in solitary confinement."
