Sommario/riassunto

Leaders need vision. In Anticipate, leadership and strategy expert Rob-Jan de Jong explains that vision requires two crucial skills: the ability to see things early; and to connect the dots, turning early clues into a compelling story about the future of an organization and industry. Readers will discover how to become better at seeing things early; tap into their imagination and open themselves to the unconventional; communicate their vision in a way that engages others and provokes action; frame the big-picture view that provides direction for the future. When companies anticipate change bef
