Nota di contenuto	Cover -- Title Page -- Copyright Page -- Contents -- Chapter 1. Collective Thinking About Mobility Scales -- 1.1. Introduction -- 1.2. The notion of mobility in social sciences -- 1.3. The need for an integrative approach -- 1.4. A new research arena -- 1.5. Articulating spatial and temporal mobility scales -- 1.6. References -- Chapter 2. A Society with No Respite: Mobility as an Interdisciplinary Concept -- 2.1. Introduction -- 2.2. Mobility as a scale of magnitudes in a reticent capitalism (Boltanski and Chiapello) -- 2.2.1. Justifying inequalities -- 2.2.2. Inequalities in a reticular context: the project-based city -- 2.2.3. Project-based cities and mobility -- 2.3. Movement: the central element of liquid modernity (Bauman) -- 2.3.1. Dissolution and anchoring of solid modernity -- 2.3.2. The fading of ends and limits -- 2.3.3. The individual, the model, shopping -- 2.4. The alienating acceleration (Hartmut Rosa) -- 2.4.1. Acceleration -- 2.4.2. Three critiques of acceleration -- 2.5. The turning point of mobility (Urry and Sheller) -- 2.5.1. Mobilities as an analyzer of social matters -- 2.5.2. Mobilities in weak link societies -- 2.5.3. The social aspect of mobility -- 2.6. Mobility as an injunction (Mincke and Montulet) -- 2.6.1. Two spatiotemporal morphologies -- 2.6.2. Mobility shifts -- 2.6.3. The mobilitarian ideal -- 2.7. Contextualizing research on mobilities -- 2.8. References -- Chapter 3. Mobility Justice as a Political Object -- 3.1. Introduction -- 3.2. Inequality and mobility justice in contemporary Western societies -- 3.3. Social justice and mobility, theoretical approaches -- 3.4. Inequalities and equity in transport and urban planning -- 3.4.1. Integrating equity in the evaluation of transport policies -- 3.4.2. Moving from inequalities in mobility to inequalities in access to facilities.

3.4.3. Evaluating equity of access to facilities -- 3.5. Mobility justice: contributions from the social sciences -- 3.5.1. Ambiguities of mobility -- 3.5.2. Mobility regimes and differentiation of mobility rights -- 3.5.3. Mobility justice in the face of the ecological emergency and social inequalities -- 3.6. Beyond inequalities, mobility justice -- 3.7. References -- Chapter 4. Appropriations and Uses of Travel Time: How to Inhabit Mobility -- 4.1. Introduction -- 4.2. The emergence of a research field in search of a position -- 4.3. The basis for exploring the uses of travel time -- 4.3.1. What are the uses of travel time for each mode of transport? -- 4.3.2. What theoretical frameworks should be used to address the qualitative dimension of travel time? -- 4.4. Inhabiting travel time: at what cost to the environment? -- 4.5. The relevance of mixed methods for building a common survey base -- 4.6. Major research studies -- 4.7. Discussions and research perspectives -- 4.8. References -- Chapter 5. Designing Space for Walking as the Primary Mode of Travel -- 5.1. Introduction -- 5.2. A diversity of approaches to the objective conditions of walking, first of all a question of scale? -- 5.2.1. Walkability of the city and the neighborhood -- 5.2.2. The urban quality and the walking environment -- 5.2.3. Applications for the development of walking environments -- 5.3. The conditions of operation, what is the place for the walker's experience? -- 5.3.1. The subjectivity of walking in its social and sensory dimensions -- 5.3.2. The atmosphere and its components -- 5.3.3. On the hermeneutic significance of atmospheres in the practice of walking -- 5.4. What are the challenges of the scales of analysis for intervention in living environments? -- 5.5. References -- Chapter 6. Residential Trajectories and Ways of Living: An Overview of France and Europe. 6.1. Introduction -- 6.2. Residential choice as social positioning -- 6.2.1. Classical models -- 6.2.2. ... to mobility turn -- 6.3. Elements of analysis of residential mobility in France and Europe -- 6.3.1. General spatial dynamics of residential mobility -- 6.3.2. Sommario/riassunto

The concept of mobility has grown enormously over the last two decades. A large part of the social sciences has been interested in the different forms of mobility, from a wide variety of spatial and temporal scales. This book presents the different spatial and temporal scales of mobility and the way in which they form a system, by associating them with essential and original research objects. It provides an in-depth review of scientific knowledge, a perspective on major societal issues, analytical tools and a discussion on the main current academic debates. The authors highlight the need to take into account both the spatial and temporal scales of mobility in order to address contemporary environmental and societal issues. The book invites us to think about the entanglement of these different scales from the analysis of rhythms by founding a rhythmology of contemporary mobilities.
