Sommario/riassunto	The aim of the present work is to use the multidimensional approach of Theo Rauch (2009) to examine EU development policy based on the case studies in the regions of Samzkhe-Javakhetia (Georgia) and Lori (Armenia). This investigation strategy can later be used in every target country of EU development policy (at all levels). The dissertation thus contributes to the practical underpinning of theoretical research in the field of development policy and tries to evaluate this policy through empirical case studies.
