Sommario/riassunto	&lt;P&gt;This book presents an innovative and imaginative&nbsp; reading of contemporary Australian literature in the context of unprecedented ecological crisis.&lt;/P&gt;&lt;P&gt;The Australian continent has seen significant, rapid changes to its cultures and land-use from the impact of British colonial rule, yet there is a rich history of Indigenous land-ethics and cosmological thought. By using the age-old idea of 'cosmos'-the order of the world-to foreground ideas of a good&nbsp;order and chaos, reciprocity and more-than-human agency, this book interrogates the Anthropocene in Australia, focusing on notions of colonisation, farming, mining, bioethics, technology, environmental justice and sovereignty. It offers 'cosmological readings' of a diverse range of authors-Indigenous and non-Indigenous-as a challenge to the Anthropocene's decline-narrative. As a result, it reactivates 'cosmos' as an ethical vision and a transculturally important counter-concept to the Anthropocene. Kathrin Bartha-Mitchell argues that the arts&nbsp;can help us envision radical cosmologies of being in and with the planet, and to address the very real social and environmental problems of our era.&lt;/P&gt;&lt;P&gt;This book will be

of particular interest to scholars and students of Ecocriticism, Environmental Humanities, and postcolonial, transcultural and Indigenous studies, with a primary focus on Australian, New Zealand, Oceanic and Pacific area studies.</P>
