Record Nr.	UNINA9910879586903321
Autore	Vanderschueren Jonas
Titolo	Queering Polishness in Polish Theatre Since 2005 : Dissenting Bodies / / by Jonas Vanderschueren
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cham : , : Springer Nature Switzerland : , : Imprint : Palgrave Macmillan, , 2024
ISBN	3-031-64538-3
Edizione	[1st ed. 2024.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (259 pages)
Disciplina	792.09438
Soggetti	Theater - History
	Performing arts
	Theater
	Sex
	Identity politics
	Contemporary Theatre and Performance
	Theatre and Performance Arts
	Gender Studies Politics and Gender
Lingua di pubblicazione
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Nota di contenuto	Chapter1: Introduction Chapter 2: The transformative power of dissensus: Polish normativity and queer dissensus in contemporary Polish theatre Chapter 3; Exploring the field, reshaping the field: On the theatre field in Poland, precarity and protest Chapter 4; Reorienting the nation: On Polish national identity, weak messianism, and queer failure Chapter 5; Challenging the Artistic Genius: On collaborative modes of production in theatre and performance Chapter 6; Decolonizing Polishness: On postcolonial theory, racism, and transphobia Chapter 7; Conclusion: On Polish normativity (revisited) and missing threads.
Sommario/riassunto	Theatre has long been an art form at the centre of public life in Poland. Whether it is the self-professed poet-prophets of the Romantic era, or the dissident theatre makers working under the strictures of state socialism, the art form has played a vital role in the development of

1.

Polish culture and politics in the context of shifting foreign occupations. This book explores the relationship between contemporary Polish theatre makers and contemporary notions of Polishness and argues that gueer theory, and specifically a Polish appropriation of queer theory, can be a crucial element to better understand the politicality of the contemporary Polish theatre field. It does this by focusing on critical theatre productions which are produced at the margins of the Polish theatre field, a choice which has been made as the field is dominated by traditional drama theatres which reproduce a Polish variation on the Western canon. This makes smaller, atypical, and independent theatre productions all the more significant, as they signify a refusal to continue the traditional role of the Polish theatre field in reproducing the canon of Polish Romanticism. As such, the book argues that contemporary Polish theatre has been marked by a struggle between those building performances and state authorities that see those creations as a threat to their authority. Jonas Vanderschueren is a postdoctoral researcher at the Cultural Studies Institute of KU Leuven, Belgium, where he specializes in contemporary Polish theatre, performance, and culture. He recently obtained his Ph.D. in Cultural Studies, which investigated the artistic strategies that contemporary Polish makers have developed to resist the pressures to comply with Polish normativity, an inseparable collision between Polish nationalism and heteronormativity. He is currently working on REFAM, a CELSA-funded research collaboration between KU Leuven, University of Tartu, and Jagiellonian University. Previously he was affiliated with the Department for Central and Eastern European Languages and Cultures of Ghent University, while he has also worked as a freelance journalist for publications as diverse as Knack, MO*, SamPol, Etcetera, and Jacobin NL.