Sommario/riassunto	This book provides an in-depth analysis of the state of handicrafts in Germany, with a particular focus on their status relative to large-scale industries. Published in 1897, it is a collection of studies initiated by a group of researchers who aim to fill the informational gaps regarding the socio-economic conditions of various crafts across different regions, particularly in Baden, Württemberg, and Hesse. The book includes contributions from local officials, clergy, and academics, offering detailed examinations of trades such as smithing, carpentry, and shoemaking. Through this comprehensive study, the authors seek to highlight the challenges and opportunities faced by small-scale industries and craftsmen in the face of industrialization. It is directed towards policymakers, scholars, and educators interested in economic history and the development of regional industries.
