Sommario/riassunto	'Politics of Violence and Fear in MENA: The Case of Egypt' explores the state-orchestrated violence in Egypt, Syria, and Turkey justified by vaguely defined terrorist threats. It analyses the "wars on terror" as cases of lengthy securitisation processes that reinforced and legitimised autocratic practices of oppression in each country. Paying particular attention to Egypt's "war on terror" that began 1981, the book looks into how and with what implications such securitisation processes are upheld throughout lengthy periods of time. Reworking the traditional securitisation theory, this book offers a novel securitisation model (the TER-model) that addresses the questions of securitisation durability and is applicable in non-liberal empirical contexts. The monograph is ideal for graduate students, researchers and policy makers in the fields of political science, International Relations, and Middle Eastern Studies. Helena Reimer-Burgrova is an independent researcher and author. She is a former associate researcher at the Institute for International Relations in Prague (CZ). She studied in Pilsen (CZ), Amman (JO), Cambridge (UK), and Munich (GE), where she earned her PhD at the Institute of Political Science at Bundeswehr University Munich.

Sommario/riassunto

This book, published by the Verein für Socialpolitik in 1875, compiles sixteen reports and assessments on the reform of the apprentice system in Germany. It examines changes in the conditions of apprentices since the dissolution of previous systems, focusing on moral and manual skill declines and improvements in living conditions. The book explores the potential for reforms through employer and worker initiatives, as well as legislative encouragement or enforcement. It highlights the challenges of integrating apprentices into the workforce, emphasizing the need for personal mentorship. The text underscores the importance of preparing youth to balance rights and responsibilities, contributing to societal stability. The intended audience includes policymakers, educators, and social reformers interested in labor and educational systems.
