Sommario/riassunto	'Anticlassicisms,' as a plural, react to the many possible forms of 'classicisms.' In the sixteenth century, classicist tendencies range from humanist traditions focusing on Horace and the teachings of rhetoric, via Pietro Bembo's canonization of a 'second antiquity' in the works of the fourteenth-century classics, Petrarch and Boccaccio, to the Aristotelianism of the second half of the century. Correspondingly, the various tendencies to destabilize or to subvert or contradict these manifold and historically dynamic 'classicisms' need to be distinguished as so many 'anticlassicisms'. This volume, after discussing the history and possible implications of the label 'anticlassicism' in Renaissance studies, differentiates and analyzes these 'anticlassicisms.' It distinguishes the various forms of opposition to 'classicisms' as to their scope (on a scale between radical poetological dissension to merely sectorial opposition in a given literary genre) and to their alternative models, be they authors (like Dante) or texts. At the same time, the various chapters specify the degree of difference or erosion inherent in anticlassicist tendencies with respect to their 'classicist' counterparts, ranging from implicit 'system disturbances' to open, intended antagonism (as in Bernesque poetry), with a view to establishing an overall picture of this field of phenomena for the first time.

Sommario/riassunto	"There is no single "right" way to invest, and this book critically reviews some of the most popular strategies." --Benjamin Felix, Portfolio Manager, Head of Research at PWL Capital, Ottawa, Canada "A thoughtful comparison on different approaches to investing, and their respective pitfalls." --Larry Swedroe, Chief Research Officer at Buckingham Strategic Wealth, Missouri, USA "Classical academic finance treats investment like a math puzzle with a single answer for everyone. Investors have the same goals, the same definitions of risk and return, and, broadly speaking, should all have the same portfolios. In contrast, Dennison recognizes that investors have reason to invest in a variety of manners. His common-sense, plain-English outline clarifies those options to young investors, near retirees, and even active investors, for whom engaged investing might seem daunting, overly mathematical, or just discouraged. 10 Ways to Invest will help investors make choices most suitable to them. Just don't tell the academics." --Daniel Peris, author of The Ownership Dividend (2024), Federated Hermes, Pittsburgh, USA This book compares and contrasts 10 distinct investment philosophies and how each leads to different approaches to investment selection, portfolio construction, and risk management in practice. Each chapter aims to outline the principles and practical decisions of each different way of investing with the goal of helping readers better understand the logical implications of their own way of investment thinking, as well as a framework for evaluating how higher level investment decisions are made by their pension funds and other institutions. Tariq Dennison TEP is an American wealth manager based in Switzerland. He previously worked at Accenture, Commerzbank, Bear Stearns, J.P. Morgan, CIBC, and Société Générale in San Francisco, New York, Toronto, London and Hong Kong, and taught fixed income and alternative investments at ESSEC Business School in Singapore.
