Sommario/riassunto

This book examines the nature of interaction between India and China in Southeast Asia. Chapters in this book explore various facets of their engagements in Southeast Asia, addressing thematic and bilateral issues. Some chapters examine Sino-India engagements in Southeast Asia, while others mainly deal with how they interact with the region's individual countries. The objective of this book is to (a) Understand why Southeast Asia is an important region for India and China, (b) Investigate how India and China are trying to engage with Southeast Asia as a region and at the bilateral level, and (c) Examine, the role of the Diasporas in linking their respective country of origin with the States they live in.
