| Sommario/riassunto      | The book examines the social, political, and environmental dynamics of El Valle de Chalco, a satellite city of Mexico City. It provides a comparative analysis over a span of twenty years, highlighting the evolving relationship between the community and its natural resources. The work emphasizes the potential of scientific research to influence societal change and advocates for sustainable development. Authored by Sonia Comboni Salinas and José Manuel Juárez Núñez, both professors at the Autonomous University of Mexico X, the book targets an audience interested in sociology, urban studies, and sustainable development. |
