Sommario/riassunto	Michel Innocent Peya's work explores the urgent need for responsible ecosystem management and global governance to combat climate change. Highlighting the leadership of Denis Sassou-Nguesso, President of Congo-Brazzaville, the book advocates for a green and inclusive transition to protect the planet. It emphasizes the importance of ecological marketing and the preservation of global public goods as a moral obligation for states. The author examines Africa's paradox of abundant natural resources yet prevalent poverty, stressing sustainable development as crucial for the continent's future. Peya calls for international cooperation and equitable distribution of resources to address climate challenges, particularly in Africa.
