Sommario/riassunto	<![CDATA[Military training was a prominent feature of higher education across the nineteenth-century South. Virginia Military Institute and the Citadel, as well as land-grant schools such as Texas A&M, Auburn, and Clemson, organized themselves on a military basis, requiring their male students to wear uniforms, join a corps of cadets, and subject themselves to constant military discipline. Several southern black colleges also adopted a military approach.   Challenging assumptions about a distinctive ""southern military tradition,"" Rod Andrew demonstrates that southern military schools
