

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910956945803321
Autore	Mulheron Rachael P.
Titolo	The class action in common law legal systems : a comparative perspective / / Rachael Mulheron
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Oxford ; ; Portland, Oregon : , : Hart Publishing, , 2004
ISBN	9786610808373 9781472563156 1472563158 9781280808371 1280808373 9781847310965 1847310966
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (616 p.)
Disciplina	347.053
Soggetti	Class actions (Civil procedure) - Australia Class actions (Civil procedure) - Canada Class actions (Civil procedure) - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (pages [507]-526) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Part I The Class Action Introduced. Chapter 1. Introduction ; Chapter 2. Features of Modern Class Action Regimes ; Chapter 3. Objectives of Class Action Regimes ; Chapter 4. A Different Approach for England -- Part II Commencement of the Class Action. Chapter 5. Suitability for Class Action Treatment ; Chapter 6. The Requisite Commonality ; Chapter 7. The Requisite Superiority ; Chapter 8. Assessing the Class Representative -- Part III Conduct of the Class Action. Chapter 9. Shaping the Class Membership ; Chapter 10. Potential Impediments to Ongoing Conduct ; Chapter 11. Monetary Relief ; Chapter 12. Costs and Funding of Class Actions.
Sommario/riassunto	"Multi-party litigation is a world-wide legal process, and the class action device is one of its best-known manifestations. As a means of providing access to justice and achieving judicial economies, the class action is gaining increasing endorsement - particularly given the prevalence of mass consumerism of goods and services, and the extent to which the activities and decisions of corporations and government bodies can affect large numbers of people. The primary purpose of this book is to compare and contrast the class action models that apply under the federal regimes of Australia and the United States and the provincial regimes of Ontario and British Columbia in Canada. While the United States model is the most longstanding, there have now been sufficient judicial determinations under each of the studied jurisdictions to provide a constructive basis for comparison. In the context of the drafting and application of a workable class action framework, it is apparent that similar problems have been confronted across these jurisdictions, which in turn promotes a search for assistance in the experience and legal analysis of others. The book is presented in three Parts. The first Part deals with the class action concept and its alternatives, and also discusses and critiques the stance of England where the introduction of the opt-out class action model has been opposed. The second Part focuses upon the various criteria and factors governing commencement of a class action (encompassing matters such as commonality, superiority, suitability, and the class representative). Part 3 examines matters pertaining to conduct of the action itself (such as becoming a class member, notice requirements, settlement, judgments, and costs and fees). The book is written to have practical utility for a wide range of legal practitioners and professionals, such as: academics and students of comparative civil procedure and multi-party litigation; litigation lawyers who may use the reference materials cited to the benefit of their own class action clients; and those charged with law reform who look to adopt the most workable (and avoid the unworkable) features in class action models elsewhere."--Bloomsbury Publishing.

---