Sommario/riassunto	This book is a comprehensive guide to Czech morphology, designed primarily for undergraduate students studying Bohemian studies at Charles University. It focuses on the functional morphology of contemporary Czech, particularly the literary language, and is intended as a textbook for compulsory lectures in morphology. The book covers morphological categories, word classes, and morphological systems, with exercises and solutions provided for practical understanding. It adopts a formal approach to linguistic categories, exploring both nominal and verbal morphology, and discusses various morphological theories and concepts. The intended audience includes students and scholars of Czech linguistics and language studies.
