| Sommario/riassunto      | Laura Pulido traces the roots of third world radicalism in SouthernCalifornia during the 1960's and 1970's in this accessible, wonderfullyillustrated comparative study. Focusing on the Black Panther Party, ElCentro de Acción Social y Autonomo (CASA), and East Wind, a JapaneseAmerican collective, she explores how these African American,Chicana/o, and Japanese American groups sought to realize their ideas | about race and class, gender relations, and multiracial alliances. Based on thorough research as well as extensive interviews, Black, Brown, Yellow, and Left explores the differences and similarities between these organizations, the strengths and weaknesses of the third world left as a whole, and the ways that differential racialization led to distinct forms of radical politics. Pulido provides a masterly, nuanced analysis of complex political events, organizations, and experiences. She gives special prominence to multiracial activism and includes an engaging account of where the activists are today, together with a consideration of the implications for contemporary social justice organizing.
