Sommario/riassunto	This book, published by the Pan American Health Organization in 2021, provides guidelines for preventive chemotherapy to control Taenia solium taeniasis. It outlines methods for formulating recommendations and includes evidence and recommendations for the use of niclosamide, praziquantel, or albendazole in endemic populations. The book also discusses the combination of preventive chemotherapy for soil-transmitted helminths in school-based programs. Implementation considerations, ethical aspects, and monitoring and evaluation strategies are addressed. It is intended for healthcare professionals, policymakers, and organizations involved in tropical disease control.
