| Sommario/riassunto      | What is it to be human? What are our specifically human attributes, ourcapacities and liabilities? Such questions gave birth to anthropology asan Enlightenment science. This book argues that it is again appropriateto bring "the human" to the fore, to reclaim the singularity of the wordas central to the anthropological endeavor, not on the basis of thesubstance of a human nature - "To be human is to act like this and                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | react like this, to feel this and want this" - but in terms of species-wide capacities: capabilities for action and imagination, liabilities for suffer
