

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910971652303321
Autore	Parr Helen <1974->
Titolo	Britain's policy towards the European community : Harold Wilson and Britain's world role, 1964-1967 // Helen Parr
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Abingdon [England] ; ; New York, : Routledge, 2006
ISBN	1-135-76756-4 1-135-76757-2 1-280-26778-X 9786610267781 0-203-31029-2
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (228 p.)
Collana	British foreign and colonial policy
Disciplina	327.4104/09/046
Soggetti	Great Britain Foreign relations 1964-1979 European Union countries Foreign relations Great Britain Foreign relations Europe
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. [207]-221) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Foreword / Michael Palliser -- Harold Wilson, Britain's world role and the European community, October 1964 to January 1965 -- Bridge-building and the empty chair : British policy towards the European community, February 1965 to February 1966 -- The politics of decision, March to October 1966 -- Free-wheeling with the general : the formation and conduct of the probe of the six, November 1966 to March 1967 -- Finding a role? : cabinet's acceptance of the European application, March to April 1967 -- The long haul to membership? : May to December 1967.
Sommario/riassunto	Harold Wilson's apparent volte-face on European Community membership in the autumn of 1966 has long puzzled commentators and Wilson's colleagues alike. Based on interviews, private papers and recently released evidence from the National Archives, this book provides a fresh interpretation of Wilson's policy towards the European Community. Studying the development of Britain's policy between 1964 when Harold Wilson took office, and 1967 when the French President General de Gaulle vetoed Britain's membership application for a second time, this book examines the rationale behind the Briti

---