Sommario/riassunto	The book explores the experiences of the third and fourth generations of descendants of victims of Francoist Spain. It highlights their journeys to uncover and acknowledge the traumatic pasts of their families, who suffered violence such as murder or imprisonment during the Franco dictatorship. The narrative delves into the challenges these descendants face in seeking recognition and understanding of their inherited histories. Through various personal stories and reflections, the book aims to bring visibility to the obstacles encountered and the social implications of these historical memories. The work is intended for readers interested in historical memory, social justice, and the intergenerational impacts of political violence.
