Sommario/riassunto

This textbook provides an overview of international drug policy using a comparative framework to explore contemporary drug issues. Using a topical approach, each chapter examines a different topic pertaining to drug policy to illustrate the range of contrasting approaches adopted including: decriminalisation, prohibition, legalisation, and harm reduction. In this way, it speaks to students in the field of criminology and justice and beyond with a focus on criminal laws and the administration of criminal justice. It draws on global examples from over 30 countries throughout to discuss and compare drug policies. The book includes a host of pedagogic features including case studies, exercises, study questions, web resources and chapter summaries. It starts by providing an overview of the psychoactive and pharmacological effects of illicit drugs, discusses how to compare policies across many countries, and provides a history of the global drug prohibition regime and how it is evolving internationally. Many of the chapter topics that follow relate to “drug control regimes” which are different forms of regulatory strategies found operating in many countries around the world. It also discusses the global movement toward the decriminalization of all drugs. It incorporates multidisciplinary, theoretical and methodological approaches drawing on the work of a wide range of scholars including historians, political scientists, sociologists, psychologists, economists, and lawyers. Steven Hayle is Associate Teaching Professor of Criminology and Justice in the Faculty of Social Science and Humanities at Ontario Tech University, Canada. Steven teaches international and comparative criminal justice courses that focus on topics including comparative criminal justice, drug policies, youth justice policy, human rights law, police systems, and anti-gang policy. Steven is also a co-chair of the Durham Region Opioid Task Force in Ontario, Canada. He is currently a member of the International Section of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences. .
