| Sommario/riassunto | This book, coordinated by experts such as Bernard Bonnet, Jean-Luc Chotte, and others, explores the complex interplay between land degradation and climate change. It examines the nature, causes, and consequences of these phenomena on ecosystems, biodiversity, and human societies. The authors discuss historical perspectives, adaptation strategies, and legal frameworks for combating land degradation. They emphasize a holistic and multi-stakeholder approach to addressing these challenges. The book is intended for policymakers, researchers, and anyone interested in environmental sustainability and climate resilience. |
