Sommario/riassunto	This book, published by the Pan American Health Organization in 2022, serves as a comprehensive guide for the detection and laboratory diagnosis of arbovirus infections in the Americas. It covers various aspects of arboviruses, including their structure, genome, and life cycle, as well as the collection, preservation, and transportation of samples. The book provides detailed information on laboratory diagnostics for diseases such as dengue, chikungunya, Zika, and yellow fever, along with recommended diagnostic algorithms. It is designed for healthcare professionals and laboratory technicians engaged in the diagnosis and study of arboviral infections, aiming to enhance biosecurity and improve diagnostic workflows.
