Sommario/riassunto

This book explores how complex systems theory can contribute to the understanding of classroom language learner motivation through an extended examination of one particular, situated research project. Working from the lived experience of the participants, the study describes how action research methods were used to explore the dynamic conditions operating in a foreign language classroom in Japan. The book draws attention to the highly personalised and individual, yet equally co-formed nature of classroom foreign language learning motivation and to the importance of agency and emotions in language learning. It presents an extended illustration of the applicability of complex systems theory for research design and process in SLA and its narrative approach shines light upon the evolving nature of research and role of the researcher. The study will be a valuable resource for practitioners, researchers and postgraduate students interested in classroom language teaching and learning, especially those with a focus on motivation among learners.

Sommario/riassunto	This book, written by Dr. Georg Neuhaus, provides a comprehensive analysis of the municipal activities and economic conditions in Königsberg, Prussia, during the early 20th century. It explores the development and management of public services such as health care, sanitation, transportation, and municipal utilities. The author examines the challenges faced by the city due to its geographical and climatic conditions, as well as economic constraints stemming from historical events like the Napoleonic Wars. The study highlights the financial struggles of the city, including its lingering war debts and limited economic resources. The book is intended for scholars and policymakers interested in urban development, public administration, and economic history.
