Sommario/riassunto

In a time of global backlash against women's rights and gender issues, this book echoes the importance of protecting the sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) of women in Africa and the Caribbean. It examines diverse SRHR issues and the linkages that exist between/across the two regions. The book presents socio-political, legal, medical, and other relevant perspectives for analysing and understanding sexual and reproductive health and rights. The main topics engage theoretical and contemporary issues on obstetric violence, abortion rights, gender-based violence, menstrual health, family planning, adolescent sexuality, etc. Zainab Monisola Olaitan, PhD, is a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Centre for International and Defence Policy (CIDP) at Queen's University, Canada. She has published widely on African politics, gender and representation, and peace and conflict studies. Tinuade Adekunbi Ojo, PhD, is the Director of the Centre for the Study of Race, Gender, and Class and an Associate Professor at the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. Shakira Maxwell, PhD, is the Senior Programme Officer in the Office of Global Affairs at The University of West Indies, Jamaica. She is also the current president of the Board of Directors of the Jamaica Family Planning Association. A timely and important book offering expansive insights on sexual and reproductive health and rights in both regions... This interdisciplinary work effectively demonstrates the interconnected yet distinct manifestations of these challenges across different contexts. I highly recommend this rich and insightful book. – Dr. Satang Nabaneh, Assistant Professor of Practice, University of Dayton Center for Human Rights. This book makes a significant contribution to knowledge by addressing critical issues in relation to sexual and reproductive health and rights in Africa and the Caribbean... It provides nuanced discussion of SRHR issues in a captivating and rigorous manner. – Professor Ebenezer Durojaye, Acting Director, Centre for Human Rights, University of Pretoria.
