Sommario/riassunto	This book presents for the first time an interdisciplinary view of property development and property developers. Fourteen contributor are brought together here from leading researchers and respected practitioners, including property analysts, economists, geographers, planners and sociologists. This rounded picture of property research explores: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* the development of quantitative and qualitative research methods</li> <li>* theories ranging from mainstream economics to social constructivism</li> <li>* the inter-relationships between the economic and the social, and between individuals</li> </ul>
