Sommario/riassunto	Richard Nairn shares his personal journey of restoring a small farm in the Wicklow Mountains into a refuge for wildlife, emphasizing the importance of nature conservation and restoration in a rapidly changing world. Through vivid observations of flora and fauna, he reflects on the interconnectedness of ecosystems and advocates for sustainable practices to preserve biodiversity. The book combines personal experiences, ecological insights, and a call to action for restoring natural landscapes, making it a vital read for environmentalists, ecologists, and nature enthusiasts.
