Sommario/riassunto	En près de cinquante ans passés au cœur du bassin du lac Tchad, le géographe Christian Seignobos a vu son terrain et son métier se métamorphoser. Nourri par ce parcours, cet ouvrage rassemble un vaste corpus de dessins et de textes originaux, comme autant de témoignages d'une pratique personnelle et professionnelle de la recherche. Architecture, agriculture, élevage, pêche, faune sauvage, mais aussi arrivée et progression des insécurités entre Cameroun, République centrafricaine et Nigeria : l'extrême variété des thèmes abordés traduit les différentes manières de faire et d'écrire les sciences humaines. Replaçant toujours l'homme au centre de son histoire et de son environnement, ces pages sont aussi et surtout, à travers les voix et les visages des informateurs et des interprètes, la chronique d'une Afrique qui se raconte.

Sommario/riassunto	Simon Rawidowicz (1896-1957) was one of the most innovative, if also underappreciated, Jewish thinkers of the twentieth century. He was a partner in conversation with many of the leading Jewish cultural or political figures of the first half of the century including David Ben-Gurion, Chaim Nahman Bialik, Martin Buber, and Simon Dubnow. His distinctive theory of "Babylon and Jerusalem" remains one of the most interesting formulations of Jewish national ideology, as it sought to mediate between the poles of Zionism and Diasporism. This volume captures Rawidowicz's multiple and overlapping concerns - both scholarly and contemporary - as well as the distinctive rich timbre of his Hebrew style. All those interested in modern Jewish thought, the relationship between Israel and Diaspora, the recurrent "Arab Question" in Zionist and Israeli politics, and the state of Jewish people will find benefit in this collection of new or hardly known texts from the pen of Simon Rawidowicz.
