| Sommario/riassunto      | There has been a lot of research and criticism into the nature of Chinese investment in African countries in the past ten years. This Special Issue brings together a set of papers which highlights not only some (fair) criticisms but also the developmental benefits that such FDI has had in some African countries. In particular in relation to job creation at the local level. The variety of investments reveal, contrary to popular 'belief', that Chinese FDI in Africa is not just about resource extraction although this is an important element. The papers also provide insight into particular aspects |

The lawes and statutes of God, concerning the punishment to be inflicted upon wilfull murdererers [[electronic resource]] : With some briefe annotations by way of explanation upon the same. Shewing (unto all those that are ignorant of it) that the (under God) most high and supream courts of magistracie and iudicature, the Parliaments of England, and Scotland, may lawfully, and are bound in point of iustice, to make warre against, and shed the bloud of all those wilfull murdererers, that are risen up in arms unjustly against them and Gods people in both these kingdoms, and in Ireland. Also, some portions of scripture, for terror to those that despise the word of God, and follow the wisdome and policy of the flesh: and for the comfort and assurance of those that doe hearken unto the counsell of the Lord, and walk in his wayes.
