| Autore | Taylor John <1580-1653.> |
| Titolo | No Mercurius Aulicus; [[electronic resource]] : but some merry flashes of intelligence, with the pretended Parliaments forces besieging of Oxford foure miles off, and the terrible taking in of a mill, instead of the King and citie. Also the breaking of Booker, the asse-tronomically London figure-flinger, his perfidious prediction failing, and his great conjunction of Saturne and Iupiter dislocated. // By John Taylor |
