Titolo	Vestibulum technicum: or, An artificial vestibulum [[electronic resource] ] : Wherein, the sense of janua linguarum is contained, and most of the leading words chapter by chapter, are compiled into plain, and short sentences, fit for the initiation of children. Each part of speech is distinguished by the character it is printed in, (a method never used before) and a sufficient grammar is brought down to the sense of seeing, in regard of the thing signified, contained in two pages. It will very much ease the master, and exceedingly promote the expeditious progress of the scholar. By M. Lewis
