

1. Record Nr.	UNISA996395765903316
Autore	Hubberthorn Richard <1628-1662.>
Titolo	The Common-wealtsh's [sic] remembrancer for discovery of the disturbers of her peace [[electronic resource]] : with a loving reproof to such offenders and a caveat to others to beware of them / / by a friend to peace with truth and true liberty, R.H
Pubbl/distr/stampa	London, : Printed for G. Calvert ..., 1659
Descrizione fisica	[2], 33 p
Soggetti	Church and state - England Church and state
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Written by Richard Hubberthorn. Cf. Wing. Reproduction of original in Huntington Library.
Sommario/riassunto	eebo-0113

2. Record Nr.	UNINA9910136377303321
Autore	Behr Andreas
Titolo	Diplomatie als Familiengeschäft [[electronic resource]] : die Casati als spanisch-mailändische Gesandte in Luzern und Chur (1660-1700) / / Andreas Behr
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Zürich, : Chronos Verlag, 2015 Zurich : , : Chronos, , 2015
Descrizione fisica	1 electronic resource (384 p.)
Soggetti	Diplomats - Milan - Italy Diplomats - Spain Italy Regions & Countries - Europe History & Archaeology Switzerland Relations Italy Milan History 17th century Switzerland Relations Spain History 17th century Spain Relations Switzerland History 17th century Milan (Italy) Relations Switzerland History 17th century
Lingua di pubblicazione	Tedesco
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Sommario/riassunto	Diplomacy as a family business. The Casatis as Spanish-Milanese envoys in Lucerne and Chur (1660-1700) The astonishing family career of the Casatis contradicts widespread impressions of early modern diplomacy. This monograph explains how a Spanish-Milanese diplomatic dynasty shrewdly managed, using a highly complex network of confessional, social and cultural connections, to concentrate and deploy its resources upon key actors, and put itself beyond competition from potential challengers. "Other than following God and their own self-interest, this people knows no further impulse," was the devastating judgment of Alfonso

Casati in 1674 concerning the Swiss Confederates. The diplomats nonetheless had to accommodate the needs of these local hosts, or lose their trust and that of their royal employer, the Spanish king. In order to fulfill the demands placed upon him as a diplomat, Alfonso Casati, like most envoys in early modern Europe, periodically reached into his own pockets. In contrast to many contemporaries, however, he did not respond to the costly requirements of the job by seeking to be relieved of his duties. On the contrary, he laid the ground for ensuring that his own son became the fourth generation representative in a nearly continuous position held by the same family.

Tapping extensive source materials which are interpreted from the perspective of various historical actors, this study not only reconstructs the position and influence of an extraordinary diplomatic family, but also shines new light on a colorful history of patronage, corruption and politics in the external relations of the Confederacy and Graubünden.
