Titolo	The parable of the sower and of the seed [[electronic resource]] : Declaring in foure severall grounds, among other things: 1. How farre an hypocrite may goe in the way towards heaven, and wherein the sound Christian goeth beyond him. And, 2. In the last and best ground, largely discourseth of a good heart, describing it by very many signes of it, digested into a familiar method: which of it selfe is an entire treatise. And also, 3. From the constant fruit of the good ground, justifieth the doctrine of the perseverance of saints: oppugneth the fifth article of the late Arminians; and shortly and plainly answereth their most colourable arguments and evasions. To which is added, A mappe of Rome, in fiue sermons, on the fifth of November, by Thomas Taylor, D.D. late preacher of Aldermanbury in London
