| Nota di contenuto | Introduction -- Section I Outsourcing of teaching English for other languages and related issues -- Chapter 1 Enactment of outsourcing in Hong Kong -- Chapter 2 Quality of outsourced education -- Chapter 3 Equity of outsourced education -- Section II Solutions and implications -- Chapter 4 Ensuring quality and equity of outsourced education -- Chapter 5 Reconceptualising equity, outsourcing and policy enactment -- Conclusion. |
| Sommario/riassunto | This book documents and analyses how outsourcing of teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) is practised, arising issues therein, and how to address them, through the frame of policy enactment theory. Educational outsourcing or contracting out is | globally adopted to increase cost-efficiency, diversify curricula, and complement teacher expertise. However, it often results in issues of quality and equity, inadvertently compromising student learning and limiting the mobility of students from low-income families. The book draws on document-based research involving 131 schools in Hong Kong and case studies and a survey with selected schools and educational service providers. This book is of interest to policymakers, school leaders, teachers, and educational service providers, as it suggests the strategies addressing the abovementioned issues and will advance their understanding of educational outsourcing, equity, and policy processes. .
